

What operations models are schools considering?

The determined operations model is a local decision. The three considerations commonly being referred to are:

- a. Full Distance Learning: This model does not have any students on campus. Instruction is provided synchronously and asynchronously. Students engage in work through prepared paper assignments and/or through computer based direct instruction.
- b. Hybrid Learning: This model allows for students to be on campus part of the time for direct instruction and at home for distance learning. On campus time would be focused on essential standards and skills and support the required work to be completed at home.
- c. Full Reopening: This model allows for all students and staff to return to campus and proceed with full school operations. It is likely some measures related to physical distancing, screening, and increased cleaning may still be in effect.

In each of these models above, it is likely there will be times when a school may have to transition back and forth between these models if health concerns arise.

How many students will we be allowed to have in a classroom?

No specific number of students has been specified and it will likely be determined taking into consideration the ability to provide for physical distancing, maintain stable cohorts, and limit congregate settings.

For reference these are the orders for Child Care facilities:

- a. Childcare must be carried out in stable groups of 12 or fewer (“stable” means that the same 12 or fewer children are in the same group each day).
- b. Children shall not change from one group to another.
- c. If more than one group of children is cared for at one facility, each group shall be in a separate room. Groups shall not mix with each other.
- d. Childcare providers shall remain solely with one group of children.
